The Capital of Strathspey, Granttown on Spey is in the Scottish Highlands, situated 14 miles from Aviemore, a traditional Highland town on the River Spey at the northern edge of the Cairngorm National Park. It is a fine example of a Georgian planned town - one of the first to be set out in this fashion - with historic buildings and striking Georgian and Victorian architecture. It is surrounded by woodland and also offers fine views of the Cairngorms Mountain range.

Founded in 1765 by Sir James Grant, the local Laird, who, due to his good deeds to the local people became known as the "Good Sir James". Today the town has plenty to offer visitors and residents in all seasons. In winter it is handy for skiing and climbing, being only 22 miles from both the Cairngorm Mountains and the Lecht ski area.

In spring the arrival of fresh leaves on the trees is striking. Many birds return from migration, and the forests become alive with bird-song. Salmon move in the River Spey, and the anglers get hopeful.

In the summer many people enjoy the countryside and adjacent woods. Watch the hills all around turn purple as the heather blooms later in the season.

Autumn brings the russet and gold of the beech woodlands.

IT REALLY IS A TOWN FOR ALL SEASONS
